Let us briefly review:

Even if you're absolutely certain a gun is unloaded, still follow these rules for safe gun handling. You want these rules to be natural habits; holding yourself to them each and every time helps make them so.

1. Treat every firearm as if it's loaded.
2. Never point a firearm at anything you are not willing to destroy. Accept the mindset to always keep a gun pointed in a direction that would safely stop the bullet should it discharge. Even unloaded and secured guns you should handle them muzzle-down, and pointing down and away from people.
3. Though we are not at the range, when handling a firearm and especially if you intend to dry fire the weapon, always be sure of your would-be target and what is beyond it. Should the unthinkable occur, you are responsible for the entire path of any stray bullet you fire from the gun.

4. Generally endeavor to keep your finger off the trigger, should you elect to dry-fire the weapon (in whatever manner this is possible with a secured breech) follow all safety protocols the same as you would in live fire. Some vendors may ask you to "index" your trigger finger and not dry fire the weapons. Thank you for taking the time to read these rules and showing the highest standard of care for our patrons and customers

5. Federal laws prohibit persons under 18 to own or possess any weapon, and those between 18 and 21 are restricted to long guns. Persons in these age categories are specifically prohibited from handling or touching the prohibited firearms. Violation of this rule will result in ejection of all related parties without refund.
